Dear LIDC members, dear speakers,
dear guests from all over the world!

Hannes
Seidelberger,
Honorary General
Secretary of the Austrian Group
within the LIDC

We are delighted to host the Annual Congress of the International League of Competition Law (LIDC) in Vienna from October 9th to 12th 2025. The general motto of the LIDC and this international conference is: “Where Competition, IP and Unfair Competition meet!” Digital and green change as well as other current subjects will be in this legal focus of Antitrust, Intellectual Property and Unfair Commercial Practices.

The LIDC (Ligue Internationale du droit de la concurrence) is a longstanding international association which was created in 1930. The League is composed of almost twenty national chapters worldwide and counts more than 800 members. This association is a unique platform for exchanging and developing ideas and knowledge, both at a national and an international setting.

There is also a special “NEX GEN” subgroup for younger lawyers who organizes events and recently produces a podcast which will bring insightful conversations, industry trends, and leadership wisdom straight, featuring voices that matter in today’s fast-evolving world.

Every year, the LIDC organises an international congress to study in particular two questions related to this legal area. National Groups or individual members write a national report on each question. The national reports constitute the basis for an in-depth international report discussed during this congress. All the reports are published by Springer and LIDC in the series “LIDC Contributions on Antitrust Law, Intellectual Property and Unfair Competition”.

Furthermore – as part of this conference – numerous lectures and panel discussions will be held on current topics in the field of antitrust law, intellectual property and fair trade law with a wide range of international experts and speakers. In Vienna we offer 10 panels with over 50 speakers, including from the European Commission, the USA, Brazil and Asia.

The congress starts on Thursday evening with a welcome cocktail and a NEX GEN event open for everyone. This is followed by working days on Friday and Saturday morning, as well as an attractive evening program, including a flying buffet in the Gloriette of Schönbrunn Palace and a galadinner at the Wiener Konzerthaus (Vienna Concert Hall) with music and dance on Saturday evening. On Sunday there is the opportunity to take part in an excursion to the famous museum at Belvedere Palace.

The historic House of Industry, with its special Art Nouveau halls and spacious entrance area, has been chosen as the venue for this congress, which is exclusively available to LIDC. We wish everyone a fruitful and enjoyable conference in Vienna!

Hannes Seidelberger
(for the Organizing Committee of the LIDC Congress 2025 Vienna)

»Vienna is once again hosting the LIDC-Congress after 2009 and we hope to welcome more than 200 participants for the first time in the history of this renowned association ...«

QUESTIONS

of the Congress LIDC Vienna 2025

Every year, the LIDC organises an international Congress to study in particular two questions related to this legal area. National Groups or individual members write a national report on each question. The national reports constitute the basis for an in-depth international report discussed during the Congress. All the reports are published by Springer and LIDC in the series “LIDC Contributions on Antitrust Law, Intellectual Property and Unfair Competition”.

We are glad to inform that the two study questions prepared by the reporters and discussed during the Vienna Congress are as follows:

Question A

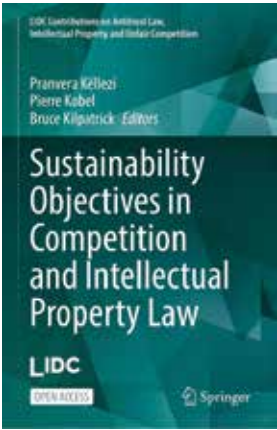

Is the concept of the abuse of relative market power beyond market dominance necessary for a functioning competition and what criteria should be used to assess it?

International Reporter Pranvera Këllezi

Question A – Background & Context

The term “relative market power”, also known in other jurisdictions as “economic dependence”, “superior or unbalanced bargaining power” or “significant imbalance in commercial relations”, is used to describe circumstances in which a company exploits its superior bargaining position vis-à-vis business partners. These rules exist all over the world, from Europe to South Korea or Brazil. In contrast to the traditional concept of dominance, the concept of relative market power is concerned with the analysis of asymmetric dependencies or bargaining positions in business-to-business (B2B) relationships, irrespective of a dominant market position or monopoly power in the traditional sense. This is relevant to business-to-business relationships, including distribution, franchising, subcontracting, supply chains and others, in both traditional and digital markets. This additional tool for regulating unilateral conduct has recently received renewed attention, reflecting a broader trend in the regulation of business-to-business (B2B) relationships. In recent years, several jurisdictions in Europe, including France, Belgium, Switzerland and Austria, have introduced or updated legislation targeting the abuse of economic dependence or relative market power. The proliferation of these legislative measures highlights the need for transparent, predictable and enforceable criteria for assessing relative market power, situations of dependence and imbalances in bargaining power in the B2B context. It also raises the question of the extent to which such provisions serve to maintain effective competition and thus form part of competition, anti-monopoly or antitrust law as it is commonly understood. This study aims to examine how these criteria are applied in practice, the challenges of enforcement and the wider implications of this regulatory trend for competition policy and the economy.

Question B

What responsibility or obligations should online platforms have when it comes to eliminating infringements by their users, especially in the areas of IP and unfair competition?

International Reporter Nikolaus Forgó

Question B – Background & Context

The starting point for this topic remains the long-standing liability privilege of intermediaries: online platforms that provide pure intermediary services remain exempt from liability for illegal third-party content and have no general obligation to monitor the content posted by their users. However, some recent laws, such as the Digital Services Act (DSA) of the European Union (EU), establish uniform rules that require hosting providers to have a mechanism in place to allow third parties to report suspected illegal content. In the future, such a mechanism could be the starting point for the liability of providers who do not act quickly after notification and remove prohibited content. In addition, trusted flaggers, as entities designated by national digital coordinators, are new players in this “notice and action” procedure, in which the operator of an online platform must immediately block offers if it becomes aware of a clear violation under the applicable law. Another innovation is the “Good Samaritan” rule in this area, which ensures that online intermediaries do not lose their liability privilege just because they voluntarily review user content. This clause is intended to give providers legal certainty when they have their employees check uploaded content to detect infringements proactively. Interesting developments have also emerged in non-EU jurisdictions.

For example, in Brazil, the Civil Framework for the Internet, a federal law enacted in 2014, is currently under challenge before the Supreme Federal Court, the country’s constitutional court. Central to the issue are legal provisions requiring a court order before illegal content on online platforms can be removed, potentially altering the dynamics of the notice-and-takedown process. Although these current developments represent a new basis for familiar principles, the significance of their specific details for the protection of intellectual property and unfair competition can be important. Moreover, the practical importance of special entities as experts at detecting certain types of illegal content and notifying online platforms will become apparent with the first experiences on it. Under the DSA, the notices they submit are supposed to be prioritised as they are expected to be more accurate than messages an average user submits. Regardless of jurisdiction, there needs to be a balance between the aim to tackle illegal content online and fundamental rights such as freedom of expression or the right to a fair trial. National groups are invited to provide an account of the emerging trends and cases before courts in their respective jurisdictions from a legal and practical perspective in the online sector.

Gloriette

The Gloriette stands on higher ground in Schönbrunn Palace park and offers a fantastic view of Vienna. Nowadays, the magnificent structure is home to Café Gloriette. Awaiting you here are delicious pastries and a wonderful view of Vienna. And on Sunday mornings, there's brunch with live music ranging from classical to jazz.

Walkers making their way through Schönbrunn Palace park are usually heading for the Gloriette. The Gloriette towers over the surrounding area of Schönbrunn, drawing attention to itself from all sides. The monumental, baroque garden structure was built in 1775 on the foothills of the Vienna Woods. As you might expect, the Gloriette boasts spectacular views over Vienna. They say if you were not up there, you haven't been to Schönbrunn. Emperor Franz Joseph I and Sisi were also truly fond of the place. They set up a breakfast hall in the Gloriette. Now-days, visitors can follow their footsteps, because the Gloriette is still home to a café.

The LIDC visits the Gloriette on Friday evening for a flying buffet and drinks and all participants can exclusively enjoy this special building on one of Vienna's most impressive locations.

Wiener Konzerthaus (Vienna Concert Hall)

The Wiener Konzerthaus is one of the largest and most artistically progressive institutions in international musical life. During the course of a season, which extends from September to June, some 750 wide-ranging events take place and more than 600,000 visitors can listen to around 2,500 different compositions. With this comprehensive and varied selection, the Wiener Konzerthaus – together with the Vienna State Opera House and the Musikverein – is central to Vienna's reputation as one of the world's leading music capitals.

From its earliest days, the Wiener Konzerthaus has held the highest cultural aims and artistic mission: »To act as a venue for the cultivation of fine music, as a meeting point for artistic endeavour, as a home for music and a cultural centre for Vienna«. It was in this spirit that the Konzerthaus was inaugurated on 19 October 1913 with a festive concert attended by Emperor Francis Joseph I. To mark the occasion, Richard Strauss wrote the »Festliches Präludium op. 61«, which was followed by Beethoven's Ninth Symphony. In the last decades also early music, jazz and new music have featured prominently within the Konzerthaus's programme, contributing to a celebration of classical music in its entire range.

The unique atmosphere of the Wiener Konzerthaus not only attract artists from the international music scene, but also forms the setting for numerous other social events such as balls, conferences, dinners, company presentations and festivities.

The LIDC takes a guided tour of the Vienna Concert Hall, followed by its traditional Gala Dinner on Saturday evening in the Schubert hall, which is decorated in the Art Nouveau style with magnificent furnishings and coffered ceiling. We have booked a fantastic live band and offer the opportunity to dance after dinner in this special venue, very close to the conference hotel.

Belvedere

The Belvedere is not only a magnificent Baroque palace. As a museum it also houses one of Austria's most valuable art collections – with key works by Gustav Klimt, Egon Schiele and Oskar Kokoschka. Prince Eugene of Savoy (1663-1736), successful general and art connoisseur, had Belvedere garden palace built by Johann Lukas von Hildebrandt as his summer residence – at the time it was still outside the gates of the city. This baroque architectural jewel consists of two palaces (Upper and Lower Belvedere), which today house Austrian art from the Middle Ages to the present day.

The heart of the Belvedere collection is formed by the 24 paintings of Gustav Klimt with his golden images »The Kiss« and »Judith«. Klimt's »The Kiss« in particular is world-famous. The 180 x 180 cm painting was created in 1908/09 and shows Klimt and his muse Emilie Flöge as a couple in love. »The Kiss« is probably Austria's most famous work of art. Klimt's portraits of women also impress and be marveled at in the Upper Belvedere.

The permanent exhibition was completely redesigned at the beginning of 2023: »Picture this! The Belvedere Collection from Cranach to EXPORT« extends throughout the entire palace in the wonderful Baroque ambience, and shows the highlights of the collection together with new additions and works from the holdings. On show is Austrian art in the context of the creative work of international artists of their time. It includes Austrian highlights from the Middle Ages and Baroque, while the icons of Vienna Modernism meet greats like Claude Monet, Vincent van Gogh, and Auguste Rodin. Around 400 works recount 800 years of art history.

On Sunday, the LIDC offers guided tours of the Lower and Upper Belvedere, as well as a stroll through the beautiful garden. We'll conclude the conference with lunch at a restaurant in this historic area.

MAJOLICA HOUSE

THE HOUSE OF INDUSTRY

A Late Historicist Masterpiece – Architectural Features and Inauguration:
The House of Industry on Schwarzenbergplatz 4 in Vienna is one of the most outstanding examples of an architectural style called “Late Historicism”.

The building is located next to the Vienna “Ringstrasse”, the magnificent ring road around the old city centre. Around the beginning of the 20th century, the Vienna Urban Development Fund began selling land outside the Ringstrasse and the river Wien, shortly after the completion of the street.

This late phase of Historicism was marked by architects such as Friedrich von Schmidt, Theophil von Hansen, Karl von Hasenauer, Heinrich von Ferstel and Karl König.

Designed by architect Karl König, the House of Industry was built between 1906 and 1909. Monumental in character but dominated by clear linearity, the building is modelled on Roman-inspired 17th century Classicism. The plain, angular façade draws from elements of 19th century Historicism, while deviating from the more ornate style typical of pre-turn-of-the-century Ringstrasse buildings.

The House of Industry was one of Vienna’s last squared stone masonry buildings. Its façade is lined with Leitha sandstone from a quarry near Stotzing in Burgenland. Algal limestone from the Mannersdorf region, as well as granite, were used for the wall base. The roof was made of Eternit slabs, a new roofing product patented in 1901.

The four-storey corner building is crowned by a huge, three-part façade with stone balustrades and cast zinc vases on both sides. The façade bears the inscription “Dedicated to Austria’s Industry”. There is a huge stone cartouche above the inscription. It is made from a 42 cubic metre block and shows a relief of Hephaestus depicted in a contemplative pose.

Representing strength paired with intelligence, the Greek god Hephaestus is a symbol of industry and the only god who was also a craftsman. A skilled blacksmith, he served human civilisation with his creations, one of his masterpieces being the arms of Achilles.

Bundesministerium Wirtschaft, Energie und Tourismus

The Federal Minister of Economy, Energy and Tourism in Austria is Wolfgang Hattmannsdorfer.

Our goal is to further enhance the positive development of the Austrian business location as the central aim to ensure wealth for the economy as such and thus working for people as entrepreneurs, as employees and as consumers. Performance-principle and competition-orientation are the core guides in doing the work and developing measures.

This work is carried out in different General Directorates, including Energy, Tourism, Economic Affairs, Innovation and International Policy, National Market Strategies including quality management and skills and Cultural Heritage.

Concerning EU-affairs and International Market Strategies internal market affairs, trade policy including export and investment policy play an important role. Within the EU portfolio competition policy is one of the core activities. It is the task of competition policy to ensure functioning competition by designing the framework concerning antitrust law and merger regulations as well as the law against unfair competition accordingly. This is achieved by working in the EU Council, the corresponding working groups and in international fora as well as by handling the respective legislative matters, eg. the Federal Act Against Unfair Competition (UWG), the Fair Competition Conditions Act (FWBG) and the Federal Competition Act (Wettbewerbsgesetz).

Bundeswettbewerbsbehörde

The Austrian Federal Competition Authority (AFCA) stands as a guardian of fair competition in Austria. Through its enforcement of national and European competition laws, its advocacy efforts, and its increasingly focused approach to sector-specific issues, AFCA plays a critical role in ensuring that Austria's markets remain transparent, fair, and open to healthy competition. Under the leadership of Dr. Natalie Harsdorf L.L.M., the Director General for Competition, the AFCA operates independently and is prepared to tackle emerging challenges and to ensure that competition remains robust in Austria.

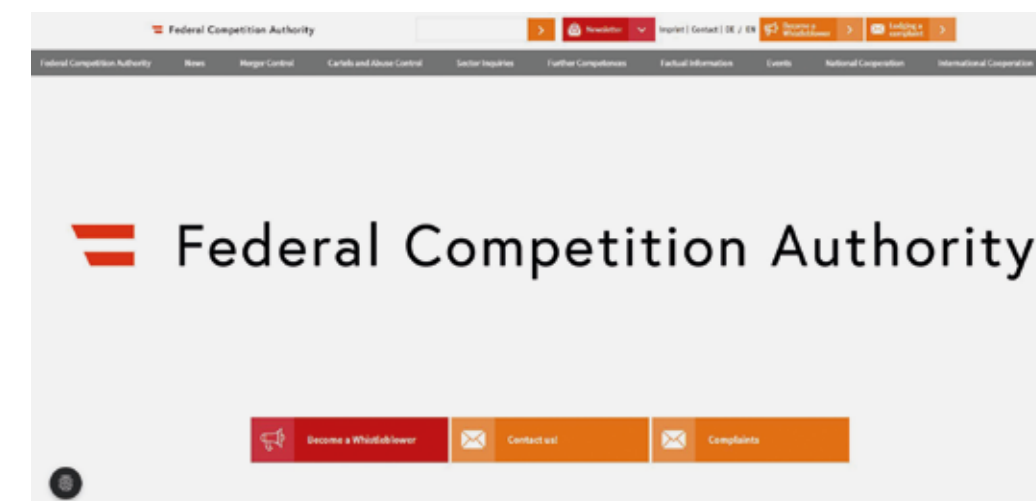

Dr. Natalie
Harsdorf L.L.M.,
Director General
for Competition

The AFCA's primary focus is on enforcing competition laws by addressing cartels, abuse of market dominance, and illegal mergers. In 2024, AFCA brought 22 cases before the Federal Cartel Court, resulting in €41 million in fines. Ongoing investigations, such as those targeting the waste management and brewery market, highlight AFCA's dedication to ensuring fairness in key sectors.

Another focus of AFCA's work is combating unfair competition through the Austrian Unfair Competition Act (UWG). AFCA can take action against misleading advertising, unfair business practices, and other deceptive tactics. The increasing number of UWG cases demonstrates AFCA's commitment to maintaining a level playing field for businesses and consumers alike.

AFCA also conducts sector inquiries, such as those into the electricity, gas, and district heating markets, to proactively identify and address market concerns. Its focus on educational and advocacy initiatives aim to raise awareness of competition law among the public and show effect as numbers of complaints and whistleblowers increase.

Whether you are a business navigating Austria's industry landscape or a consumer benefiting from fair market practices, AFCA's work ensures that competition remains the driving force behind Austria's dynamic economy.

Wirtschaftskammer Österreich

Wirtschaftskammer Österreich (WKO), the Austrian Federal Economic Chamber, is the statutory organisation, representing the interests of the Austrian economy. Aside from that its main tasks include services and education.

Representation of interests: The WKO is actively committed to improve the economic framework conditions in Austria. It represents the interests of its members at regional, national, and EU levels, playing a key role in shaping economic policy processes.

Services: The WKO offers comprehensive support to its legally stipulated members. It serves as the first point of contact for information and advice and promotes regional, national, and global economic developments.

Education: The WKO is a central qualification partner and knowledge broker. It provides expert knowledge worldwide and at any time, utilising innovative technologies and media. This is achieved through the “Wirtschaftsförderungsinstitut” (WIFI), the Economic Promotion Institute, which is the largest organisation for adult vocational training in Austria.

Organisational structure: The Economic Chambers have both a regional and a professional structure. Regionally, it consists of the WKO, based in Vienna, and nine economic chambers in the nine federal provinces.

From a professional perspective, the organisation of the chambers of commerce comprises entrepreneurs from more than 1500 professions. These are assigned to 93 professional organisations, which are divided into seven sectors: Trade and Crafts, Industry, Commerce, Banking and Insurance, Transport and Traffic, Tourism and Leisure, and Information and Consulting. This structure exists both in the WKO and in the economic chambers in the nine federal provinces.

The organisation of the Economic Chambers is therefore a complex entity characterised by diverse tasks and structural divisions, playing a central role in the Austrian economy.

Industriellenvereinigung

The Federation of Austrian Industries

The Federation of Austrian Industries (IV) is the voluntary and independent representative of the interests of Austrian industry and its associated sectors. As a recognised partner of politics, the IV works towards the positive development of Austria. It represents the interests of its currently more than 5,000 members from the manufacturing sector, the banking industry, infrastructure and industry-related services in the federal states, the federal government and in Brussels. Efficient and focused, the IV provides a platform for its members to help shape industrial, economic and socio-political issues.

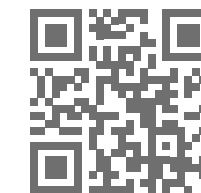

Austria, the industrial country

Industry provides jobs, prosperity, progress and future for society. Every investment made by industry is an investment for generations. Like no other, the manufacturing sector has understood how to utilise structural change as an opportunity for growth in times of increasing globalisation. Like no other sector, industry is exposed to enormous international competitive pressure. And like no other sector, industry has succeeded in strengthening its competitiveness.

Today, Austria is one of the most modern industrial nations in the world. Industry and its related sectors are the foundation of economic success, general prosperity and high quality of life in the country.

EU advocacy of the Federation of Austrian Industries

About two thirds of legislation relevant for the competitiveness of Austrian companies originates from EU legislation. The Federation of Austrian Industries has been an active and long-standing supporter of European integration. Hence, the IV founded its permanent Brussels Office as early as 1988, prior to Austria's EU membership. As IV's Department for European Affairs, the IV Brussels Office coordinates the involvement of the IV at European level, is in charge of relations with European policymakers and the EU institutions, and is the permanent Austrian representative at the European industry and employers' association BusinessEurope.

Österreichische Vereinigung für gewerblichen Rechtsschutz und Urheberrecht – ÖV

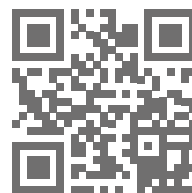

The Austrian Association for the Protection of Industrial Property and Copyright (“Österreichische Vereinigung für gewerblichen Rechtsschutz und Urheberrecht – ÖV”) – which was founded 1958 – deals with a wide range of topics in the fields of intellectual property, copyright and competition law. The members of this independent and non-profit organisation based in Vienna are entrepreneurs, lawyers, patent attorneys, judges, university professors, public institutions and other entities. With about 180 members the ÖV has reached its highest level in recent years.

This Association publishes the renowned journal “Österreichische Blätter für gewerblichen Rechtsschutz und Urheberrecht (ÖBI)”, in which leading experts report on the latest case law and legal developments every two months. Together with the MANZ publishing house, the Association also organises the popular annual ÖBI-Seminar, which for 30 years has provided an up-to-date, practice-oriented overview of unfair competition, trademark, design, patent, copyright and antitrust law. The other discussion forums offered in various formats, such as the IP-Lunch held in smaller groups and the ÖV-Expert Talks, which regularly feature presentations by international experts, are very much in demand too. Apart from these events, the Association regularly issues statements on proposed legislation, providing valuable input from a practical and scientific perspective.

The Association is in close contact with international organisations such as the AIPPI (Association Internationale pour la Protection de la Propriété Intellectuelle) and the LIDC, whose Austrian national group is formed by the Association and was significantly involved in the realisation of this congress in Vienna (and also organized the last conference of the Ligue in 2009). The membership provides optional additional membership of these two associations.

The ÖV provides regular information about its activities on its website www.oev.or.at, where you can also find the latest news and reports. Furthermore, members regularly receive different newsletters by e-mail with current information.

Schutzverband gegen unlauteren Wettbewerb

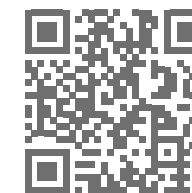

The Austrian Protection Association against Unfair Competition (“Schutzverband gegen unlauteren Wettbewerb”) has been a renowned institution for more than 70 years now and is regarded as one of the most relevant contact points for competition law in Austria. The non-profit and independent association is based in Vienna and counts more than 700 professional organisations from all sectors among its members. As a ‘guardian of fair competition’, it has engaged in fair competition and equal opportunities for all entrepreneurs since 1954.

The Association intervenes on the basis of complaints from its members and calls for cessation of anti-competitive behaviour. As Austria’s largest association for the promotion of economic interests of entrepreneurs under Section 14 of the Austrian Unfair Competition Act (UWG), it has also contributed significantly to legal development by conducting several proceedings all the way to the Supreme Court. The Association is also represented in the Unfair Competition working group at the Austrian Ministry of Labour and Economics and at the LIDC (International Ligue of Competition Law).

Besides that, the Association is also active at European level and was the first Austrian organisation – and one of the first in Europe – to be appointed as a Trusted Flag-ger under the Digital Services Act (DSA), with regard to unfair competition law and intellectual property protection. In addition, its CEO is responsible for the General Secretariat of the Austrian Association for the Protection of Intellectual Property (ÖV), which as the Austrian group of the LIDC was substantially involved in the organisation of the 2025 Congress.

Finally, the Association regularly reports on new jurisdiction and innovations in competition law. It publishes the annual journal ‘Recht und Wettbewerb’ (Law and Competition) and the popular “Wettbewerbsfibel” (Competition Handbook) as a practical and illustrated book on competition and antitrust law. It also provides regular updates on new developments in competition law on its website www.schutzverband.at and on LinkedIn with its long-time CEO Hannes Seidelberger.

At GEISTWERT, we are five lawyers whose shared interest for intellectual property and TMT brought us together. As experienced and recognized experts in the area of intangible rights and related fields, we founded GEISTWERT, a center of expertise. This law firm is able to work with a high concentration of a rare type of specialized knowledge, allowing it to keep a close watch on the everyday changes showing up on the radar in the highly volatile area of intellectual property, technology and media. As a veritable intellectual powerhouse, our main mission is to help clients and colleagues reach their goals in the best possible way.

Testimonial
(Legal 500 EMEA TMT 2025):
"We work with GEISTWERT on IP, IT and media transactions. They handle such matters perfectly, in my view better than any full-service firm because IP and technology-driven aspects are their core focus. We appreciate their partner-centred approach."

Individual members from countries where no national group is currently constituted can also become a LIDC member.

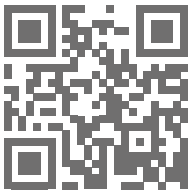

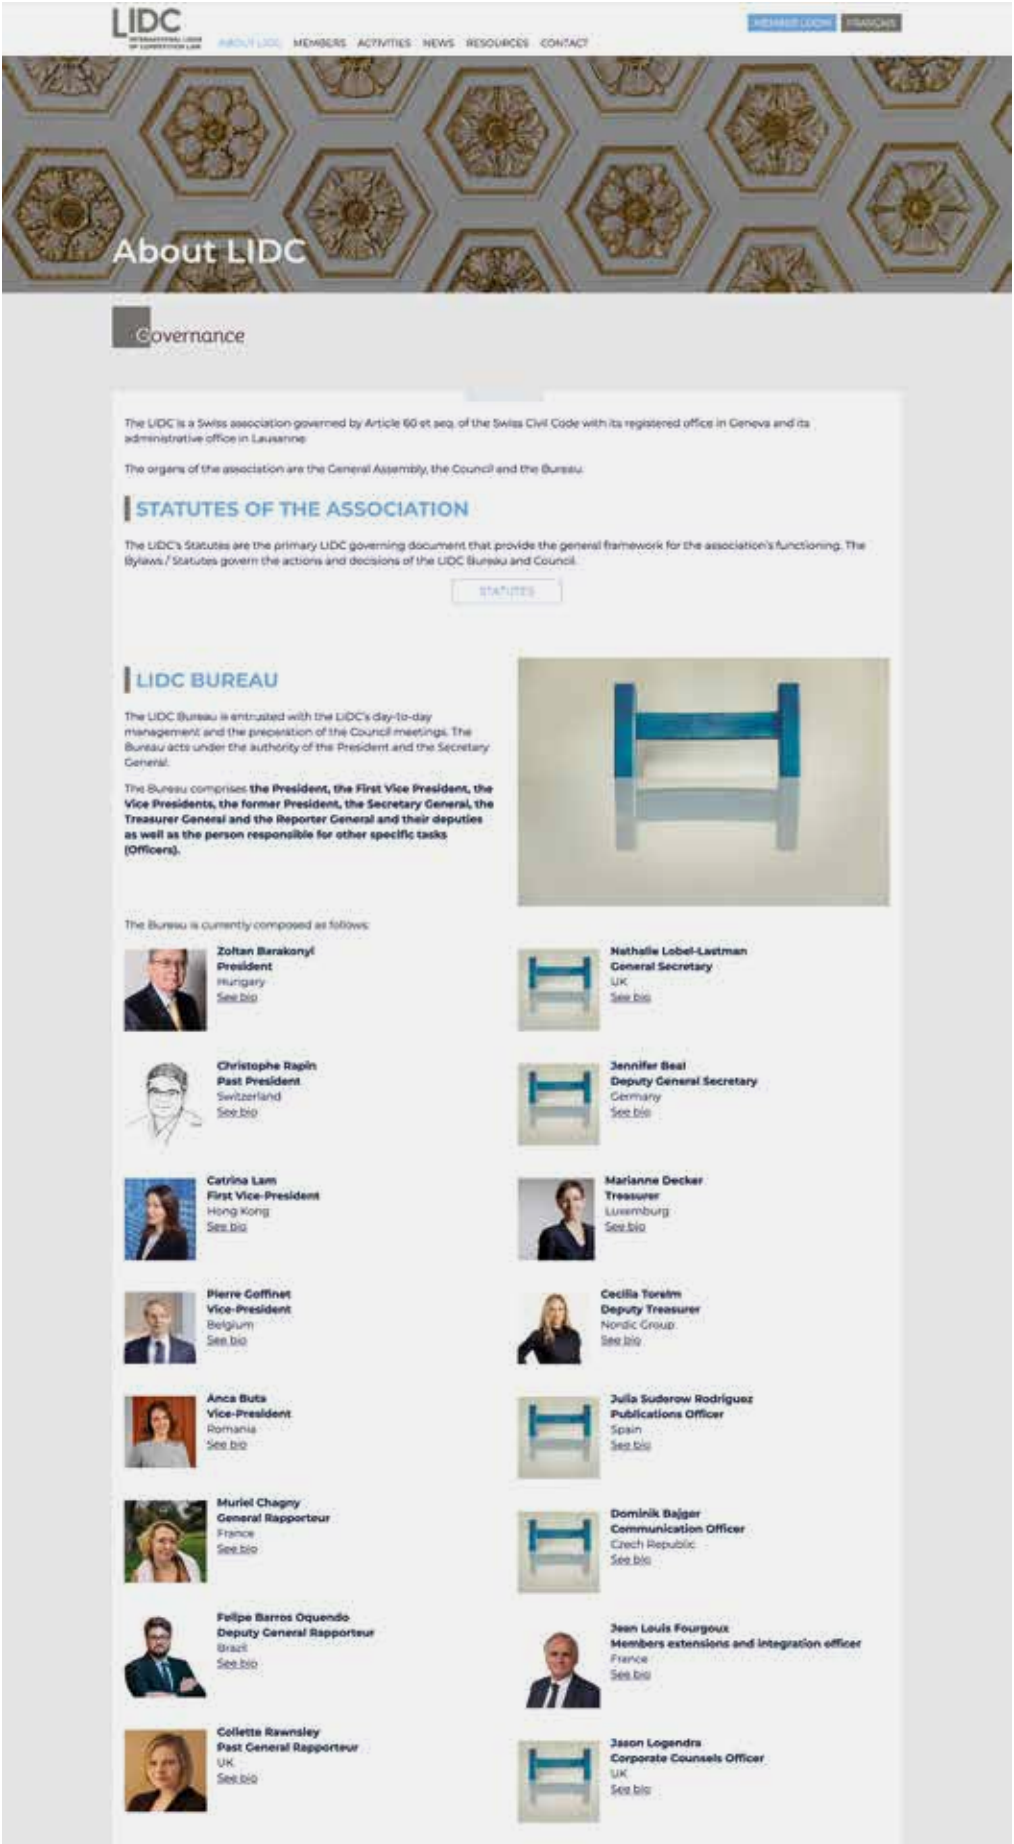

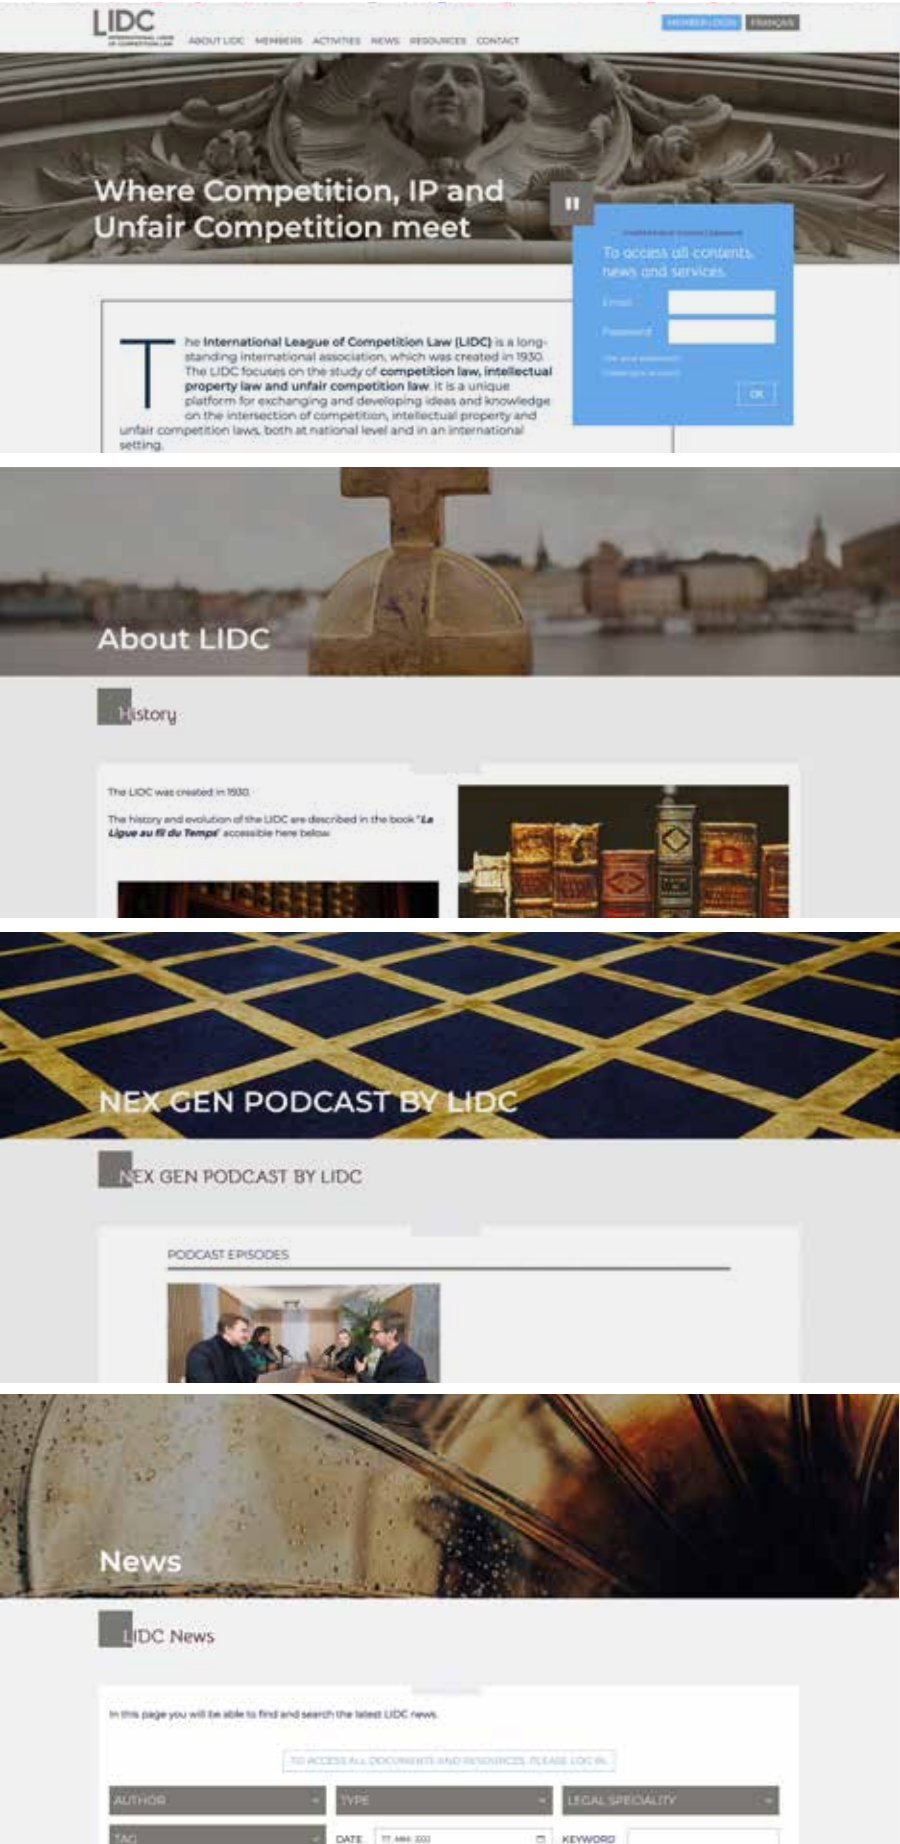

- The LIDC's objectives are:
- to promote the principles of fairness and justice in competitive trade;
 - to collect together information and documentation relating to (unfair) competition law and intellectual property law in various countries;
 - to provide documentation and information on these subjects;
 - to study and compare the legislation of the different member countries and to propose solutions for the problems faced in (unfair) competition and intellectual property law at both the national and the international level;
 - to publish the principles formulated by the LIDC in the fields of competition law, intellectual property law and unfair competition;
 - to research and defend the means of assuring freedom in commerce and business.

Every year, the LIDC organises an international Congress like last year 2024 in London and this year in Vienna.
